OFFICE BOY BOBBY SCORES BIG BEAT.

Embryo Reporter Tells in His Own Graphic and Thrilling Way How The Evening World Got the First News of the Verdict in the Paterson Trial.

door which the rival news paperman had left open for to earry out the verdict."

When Bobby the office boy gets left ime to wear ear flaps and sealskin sent Bobby to Paterson to manage the efficient corps of reporters and artists despatched under his orders, and it was at Paterson he met Dopey Isaac, the star writer and all-around ethnological expert of another paper. It wasn't Dopey Isaac's fault that he met Bobby and found his Waterloo. The latter tells his story modestly as becomes a hero, as follows:

STATEMENT BY BOBBY.

The City Editor sent me down to Paterson. I did not particularly want to go, but I hated to say "No," and so took the early boat to Paterson, having in charge a number of reporters and things. I don't think Jersey law is putte as dignified as New York law. I reported the Molineux trial every day, out I did not get whacked over the head by a bailiff or "tipstuff" as I did in Paterson. I tried to get into the ourt and a fat man with a cast in his face hit me with a broom handle. "You press." He wilted and took me and in-

Well, when the day of the verdict came it was about 8 o'clock and the Judge he came in and called the jury up and the prisoners and the reporter and artists and things. Then I said to the Sheriff if I could go through his door with the verdict I'd remember him when he came to New York. He said all right.

Then I sneaked down and locked the front door which the man from another paper had left open for to be able to rush through with the verdict. The telegraph office was down the street. The "Guilty" I didn't wait for nothing, but with great speed and just hurled my self down the stairway. He was rushing for the front door when I passed him practically in the air. I turned quickly to the left. He struck the front door and found it locked. Hully-gee

His Rival Locked Himself In.

While I was doing this the rival news. paperman dashed for another door. He opened it and passed through, locked it behind him, and—found himself in a lumber room with no other door. Hullygee! more cuss words and five minutes lost trying to turn the rusty key in the rusty lock and getting into the corridor again. When he got in the corridor he found all the doors locked and our Joe—he's another office boy with a red head—filmflamming the rival newspaperman's office boy, who had also the verdict. When they all got out of the building the news of "Guilty of murder in second degree" was already being sold on the streets of Manhattan Borough in the hundreds of thousands of Evening Worlds which gave to the people the first news of the law on three hideous monsters of crime.

He Was a Prudent Boy.

The rival newspaperman threatened to break my neck if he met me, but I kept out of his way, for I knew there was no use getting into a discussion with him as all the hospitals are overcrowded in New York and there wouldn't be no place to put him to recuperate him from his injuries. They told mo that he finally got his news to the telegraph office by waving his sairt through the window of the Public Prosecutor's office. It was a red shirt with a dickey on it just like the stage shirts they wear in plays where the hero saves the train from being wrecked by the villain. This I didn't see myself, but heard it from persons whose word has very often been truthful.

Served a Year; Arrested Again. When Michael Reynolds, check forger, walked out of Sing Sing a free mat this morning he was tapped on the shoulder by Detectives Becker and Judge, who escorted him back to New Tork a prisoner. He had finished : fear's sentence for one forgery, and was arraigned in the West Side Court at noon for passing several worthless sheeks on Bernard Hershowsitz, a drygoods dealer at 785 Ninth avenue.
